

Fire Safety Awareness

Providing your employees with the training necessary to protect them and your workplace as well as complying with the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order

The Fire Safety Order places a responsibility on all employers and business owners to provide employees with adequate fire safety training. This training should be regularly refreshed and evidence of training recorded in the fire logbook.

Our Fire Awareness course is designed to provide training to all employees on the hazards of fire in the workplace as well as preventative measures and actions in the event of fire.

Who is this course for?

The employer is responsible for ensuring all their employees receive fire training relevant for their role. This course is designed to ensure every candidate is armed with the key information to help prevent and respond safely to fire, and support their workplace in their obligations to basic fire safety.

Course topics:

- Fire safety regulations and legislation
- Definition and duties of the 'Responsible Person'
- Types and classifications of fire
- Common causes of fire in the workplace – hazard spotting
- Fire safety features in buildings
- Action on discovering a fire & evacuation procedures
- Fire Extinguishers
- Daily and weekly fire safety checks
- Record keeping

DID YOU KNOW?

There were 233 fire related fatalities, and over 6000 casualties in the year ending June 2024?

The course content is flexible to ensure that every Fire Awareness programme is relevant to your specific workplace and employees. All students will receive a student training pack which contains the Fire Safety reference manual for use during the course and for reference at work.

On successful completion a WorkSafe certificate will be awarded and is valid for 3 years, however it is vital that employees are regularly refreshed in their knowledge so annual fire safety training may be beneficial to your workplace.
